

Inexpensive Teacher Appreciation Ideas

Here are a few ideas for ways to show your staff you appreciate the work they do.

- Ghost suckers made out of Tootsie Pops and Kleenex, with the note, "Don't have a ghost of a chance without you."
- Little Nestle Crunch Bars with the note, "Thanks for your help at crunch time."
- A small mirror with the note, "You are looking at a very special person."
- A pencil/pen with the note, "Thank you for helping us write the future."
- Pay Day bars with the note, "Thought you could use an extra pay day."
- $100,000 bars with the note, "You are worth much more to us than this."
- Plastic glove popcorn hands with the note, "Thanks for lending a hand on..." Works with hands cut out of construction paper as well.
- In October we got the little candies that look like pumpkins and attached the note, "Thank you for helping us harvest our potential."
- A Mounds Bar with the note, "Thanks for playing with the children everyday! I've noticed the mounds of fun the children have."
- A small pack of crayons with the note, "A crayon to color your day. Thanks for brightening the children's day."
- A small pack of peanuts with the note, "Things have been a little nutty. Thank you for hanging in there."
- A band-aid with the note, "Things have been a little rough. Thanks for helping to make it all better."
- A puzzle piece with a note, "Without you, things wouldn't be complete."
- A Lifesaver with a note, "It has been one of those days."
- Hugs & Kisses candies and a note, "Getting these can make it all worthwhile."
